Dear Families,

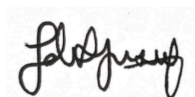

At Foxfield, we view homework as a means to reinforce learning in the classroom, with a key focus on nurturing the joy of reading. We encourage parents and carers to ensure children are reading for pleasure every day. Reading is the single most important activity children can do at home. In addition, we ask that parents and carers support children in practising essential skills which are fundamental to their learning, including arithmetic, multiplication tables and phonics.

Our homework offer reflects this, and can be found in the Homework section on our website here. Occasionally, your child may be given an additional, short task designed to consolidate and extend a key skill that they have recently learned in class. This measured approach ensures home learning is meaningful, manageable, and supports a healthy balance between school and home life.

We also upload our half-termly curriculum newsletters onto the Foxfield website, so you can easily access and view the topics and subjects your child will be studying in that half term, and where further information about trips and homework can be found. Click here to view the curriculum newsletter section.

Should you have any questions about our homework offer, please speak to your child's class teacher or phase leader.

Best wishes,

Ms Yusuf
